

AdQue® Internet Kiosk Web-Access Without Worry

The AdQue Internet Kiosk has all of the capabilities of an AdQue system with the addition of web browsing. A keyboard and mouse is added to the system, or a touchscreen can be used. When the system is idle, the display screen shows your messaging. Then, when activated, through a keystroke, mouse movement, or touch, the AdQue system will direct the user to the webpage of your choice.

Uses for the AdQue Internet Kiosk are only limited to your imagination, but typically include:

- Accessing a user's account information
- Viewing internet specials on your website
- Browsing items for sale

A timer is started each time the kiosk is accessed. A user can actively use the kiosk for any length of time and then close the session to protect personal data. If the session is not actively closed, a 10 second warning window will appear after a period of inactivity. If the user does not respond, the session will be closed, and there is no need to worry about personal information remaining on the screen. AdQue messaging will then reappear until the next use.

There are no fears of illicit use of the internet, as the AdQue Internet Kiosk has disabled all navigation features except: Home, Back, Forward, Refresh, and Stop. Users will be able to view the webpage you wish them to see, and are not able to surf sites not of your choosing. Other hot key combinations such as ctrl+alt+del are disabled to prevent malicious or accidental access to the computer. The user is limited to whatever actions are permitted on the portion of the website that is allowed access.

The opening webpage is easily reassigned, and it is simple to add items such as printers to the AdQue Internet Kiosk. Managing the AdQue Internet Kiosk is no different from managing any AdQue System; use AdStudio or AdStudio Express to create a storyboard and publish.
